Catholic Studies Report: Fall 2009

1. Updating the Web [Our web page was seriously lacking and must be brought up to par before we publicly refer students to it.]

   A. A complete inventory of courses and their course descriptions
   B. A list of current courses offered
   C. A list of courses offered in the Spring. [This list must still be augmented by the list sent by the registrar’s office. That list was corrected and sent back to the registrar.

   [Only a partial list has been put on the Web. Getting the descriptions for courses from the respective departments is a Herculean task, which I have finally turned over to student assistants. A full list of these courses could not be obtained until Carol Cortazzo returned to campus. Descriptions for each of these many courses is presently being sought by students.

For the Future

2. A public meeting, well advertised, for any interested students. This will require food and drink to lure students to a meeting during their lunch hour.

   A short presentation on the Catholic Studies Program, explaining how easy it is to obtain a minor, considering some courses that students already are required to take.

3. Redo brochure?
